

High-touch
service is not premium
if nobody knows
what it costs.

Private banks often define service levels clearly.

What they rarely measure is the actual effort consumed by each relationship.

Without that visibility, “high-touch” can mean premium service — or an unpriced subsidy.

The difference is margin.